

Mark: “I am Mark. I left with Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary trip, but I grew fearful and went back. Paul was angry for a long time, but finally forgave me and asked for my help.”

Matthew: “I am the apostle Matthew, also called Levi. I collected taxes for the Romans, which made the Jews angry with me. I had a lot of very bad friends until I followed Jesus.”

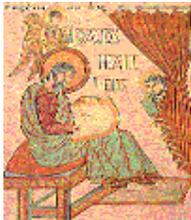

Luke: “I am Dr. Luke, a physician. Like most Greeks, I love to reflect on Jesus’ teaching. I accompanied Paul on several missionary journeys. I saw the Holy Spirit transform people of different countries as we told them about Jesus and gathered them into new congregations.”

John: “I am John, the first disciple to arrive at Jesus’ empty tomb. I am the only apostle that did not die as a martyr. God let me reach old age, although in exile, to write messages from Jesus.”

Have the believers tell aloud how accounts from the Gospels have helped them.

To introduce the Lord’s Supper, read Matthew 27:27-31. Explain that Jesus’ suffering was the penalty for our sins. He suffered and died for us. We remember this every time we celebrate the Lord’s Supper.

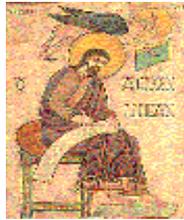

Memorize together John 8:31-32.

The Four Gospels Testify About Jesus Understand how the four Gospels are alike and how they differ

Those who teach children should read study #37 for children.

Prepare yourself by prayer and by the Word of God.

Prayer: “Holy Father, you have testified to us about your Son, Jesus, and given to us the four Gospels. Give us grace to know them, to obey them and to teach them to others.”

1. Background

- Since ancient times the testimony of several witnesses is stronger than that of one. According to the Law given by Moses, a legal trial required two or three witnesses.
- The Holy Spirit has given to us four witnesses to the Life and teachings of Jesus: Mark, Matthew, Luke and John, the compilers and writers of the four Gospels.
- Each of the four Gospel writers lived while Jesus was on earth. Three of them knew him well, and Luke investigated the facts about Jesus (Luke 1:1-3). Thus, the four gospels are ‘eye-witness’ accounts, the strongest kind.
- All four writers included in their Gospel some of the same accounts about Jesus, and each one adds some accounts that the others left out. Yet all agree; the four Gospels form a single true story.
- Centuries later, other religions tried to change the stories about Jesus, but we can trust the original four Gospels.

Find from Luke 1:1-4 where the Gospels came from.

Memorize the name and main personality traits of each of the four Gospel authors:

Mark

- Mark was a young man when Jesus was crucified.
- He was from a Jewish family, saw Jesus, and knew the Apostle Peter well.
- He later served with the Apostle Paul. He probably wrote his Gospel earlier than the others did theirs.
- It is the shortest Gospel and mostly recounts the actions and activities that Jesus performed. People from Rome valued power and especially liked to read Mark's Gospel.

Matthew

- Matthew was a serious Jew and customs tax-collector until Jesus told him, "Follow Me."
- He used some parts of Mark's Gospel and included more accounts that he knew personally.
- He related a lot of events and details about Jesus that Jewish people understood well.

Luke

- Luke, a non-Jewish medical doctor, became a believer after Jesus died and rose.
- He travelled with the Apostle Paul. While Paul was in prison in Judea, Luke travelled there and investigated eye-witness accounts about Jesus.
- Luke described many details about Jesus and the people whom he met, showing that he listened carefully to the eye-witnesses whom he interviewed in Judea.
- Luke included many historical and medical facts that appeal to non-Jewish readers.

John

- John had been a follower of John the Baptist until he met Jesus and become one of his most devoted followers.
- John lived a long life. Before he died, he wrote his Gospel to supply accounts that the other Gospels had left out.

- He recorded many of Jesus' long talks that Christians of every background enjoy reading.

Together, the four Gospels present the main events from the life of Jesus, along with many of his teachings, commandments and promises.

- All of the gospels recount how Jesus was crucified and buried, and how he rose to life and appeared to many witnesses.
- Reading and telling accounts from the four Gospels is the most effective way that we can evangelise others.

2. Plan with your co-workers activities for the coming week.

Discuss together who the four Gospel authors were, and how their writings are alike and how they differ.

- Visit the homes of believers and unbelievers.
- Explain to all that the four Gospels present true stories from people who knew Jesus
- Leave with unbelievers a copy of one of the Gospels for them to read.
- Leave with the believers a plan to read through one of the Gospels.

3. Plan with your co-workers the up-coming congregational worship.

Have the children present their drama and the questions that they have prepared.

Explain how the four Gospels are true history, very different from other religious books that tell stories about false gods or about somebody's dreams.

Let four believers represent Mark, Matthew, Luke and John. They introduce themselves and explain the facts about them that are listed under Part 1.
